(Springdale, PA) &ndash; Today, on what would have been Rachel Carson&rsquo;s 101st birthday, U.S. Congressman Jason Altmire (PA-04) and the United States Post Office (USPS) held a ceremony to officially rename the Springdale Post Office as the Rachel Carson Post Office. Congressman Altmire introduced legislation last year to rename this post office in honor of Rachel Carson, a Springdale native who is best known for her writing on natural history, environmental research, and the promotion of policies to protect public health.

&ldquo;Renaming this post office after Rachel Carson is a wonderful way to celebrate the tremendous impact she had in increasing Americans&rsquo; appreciation of nature,&rdquo; Altmire said. &ldquo;It has long been a point of pride for Springdale that one of the greatest environmental writers in history was raised right here. The Rachel Carson Post Office will now serve as a lasting tribute to this great woman and her western Pennsylvania roots. I am pleased that I could play a role in helping Springdale honor one of its most famous residents.&rdquo;
