

Altmire, English Announce $800,000 for Hermitage Technology Center

(Washington, D.C.) -- U.S. Congressmen Jason Altmire (PA-04) and Phil English (PA-03) today announced that Hermitage is receiving $800,000 in federal funding for the construction of a technology innovation and development center at the LindenPointe Innovative Business Campus.

(Washington, D.C.) -- U.S. Congressmen Jason Altmire (PA-04) and Phil English (PA-18) today announced that Hermitage is receiving $800,000 in federal funding for the construction of a technology innovation and development center at the LindenPointe Innovative Business Campus. These funds were made available through the U.S. Department of Commerce's Economic Development Administration. The funding is expected to lead to 200 new jobs and $2 million in private investment for the project.

"The construction of a technology innovation and development center at LindenPointe will create jobs and spur economic growth in Mercer County," Altmire said. "This federal funding will help develop this proposed center into a valuable asset for the community and an anchor that can draw new businesses to the area."

"Today's announcement is a real win for Mercer County and the surrounding region," English said. "This critical funding will bolster the development of a technology innovation and development center at LindenPointe, helping to boost economic development and create more good paying jobs for local residents."

LindenPointe is a 115-acre innovative business campus designed to draw more small and medium-sized businesses to Mercer County. The new center receiving the funding that Congressmen Altmire and English announced today will provide training opportunities to enhance the emerging semi-conductor/electronics and biomedical / biotechnical clusters being housed at LindenPointe.
